Moisture- Mobile flex is totally impervious to water. It's strength can not be adversely affected by moisture. Because of it's black polyethylene coating, Mobile Flex qualifies as a vapor barrier. Technical report #19757 from Chicago Paper Testing Laboratory, Inc., reports the material to have an average perm rating of 0.037.

Durability- Mobile Flex is produced from a material that has been tested for durability and weatherability. After seven years of continuous, direct exposure to the elements in Arizona, the material retained 70% of it's strength. The tapes and coatings are both chemically tested to ensure maximum performance.

Flammability- Mobile Flex is classified by Underwriters Laboratories, Inc., as to surface burning characteristics. Mobile Flex tested out to zero flame spread and zero smoke developed. The tests were conducted in accordance with UL Standard Test Method for Surface Burning Characteristics of Building Materials, UL 723

Zip Up Peel & Stick Zipper Door

Packed 2 per package, 7' long

Instant Entrance/Exit for use on Tarps, Plastic Coverings and Shrink Wraps

After removing the poly coated paper backing, Zip Up is applied to the desired access area. With a razor knife, the cut is made creating access!

A single Zip Up forming a slot or flap is the simplest application.

Two units spaced apart will create an opening that can be rolled up for even more access. This is very useful for moving materials and equipment into sealed areas. This enables the user to reduce the spread of dust and debris, as well as conserving energy.

Zip Up is considered to be an important element in the design and installation of environmental containment systems. This method contains 100% of sandblast and paint residuals when closed. The zipper enables the containment process to be weatherproof and provides an air tight containment as specified in the SSPC Guide61.
